

Transformation of the district court, Yverdon Through a series of targeted interventions, the ancient barrack was transformed into a court building. Spaces receive a clearly differentiated treatment from one floor to another: public area on the ground floor, audition rooms on the first floor and staff / administration spaces on the top story (offices, cafeteria and library). The most visible intervention is the new wooden wall spread out over three levels. It structures the distribution spaces of the lower levels and transforms into book shelving on the top floor.
